Good Morning

Welcome back from your break. We hope the first week went well as you ease back into school.

This term starts off with a pleasant evening at Sunset@CDU on Thursday 30 July. Following this event, we will be present at a string of NT Skills, Employment and Careers Expos, beginning with Alice Springs. We have already sent out requests for those who would like us to come and visit your school when we will be in your part of town.

Most importantly our biggest event - Open Day - is coming up again in August and we wouldn't want you to miss out on this great opportunity to explore Casuarina campus and find out more about Charles Darwin University.

It will be great to see you all again especially at our new Pop-Up Sessions starting from next week.

Enjoy Term 3 and take advantage of this lovely weather while it lasts.

Best regards,

CDU Schools Engagement Team

Pathways for Indigenous students into higher education can be complex. They often involve concerns relating to equity and social inclusion. Similarly, Indigenous student transitions into higher education can involve a combination of personal, institutional and systemic challenges. This forum will be an opportunity to discuss, debate, and reflect on these issues.

Good News Stories

Design graduate receives top architecture award

A design graduate with a passion for tropical architecture has won an esteemed award.

Charles Darwin University Bachelor of Design graduate Sarah Young said her affinity with Darwin architecture stemmed from her family’s long association with the Top End.

“I love the history of Darwin and my family went through Cyclone Tracy, so that sits quite strongly with me,” she said.

Sarah recently won the Student Award at the 2015 NT Architecture Awards and is undertaking a three-month paid placement at Mode Design in Darwin through a CDU faculty award.

All awarded projects will be nominated for the National Architecture Awards, which will be announced on 5 November.
